Best: Vacuum Tank Allwaste Recovery Dallas

Jul 1, 1995 12:00 PM
WORLD WASTES STAFF

Three's definitely a charm for Steve Charo, op-erations manager at Allwaste Re-covery Systems. For the third year, this Dallas company's entry has won the Design

Contest's "Best Vacuum Tank."

"The Kenworth truck and the Pro-co trailer got their design when we took delivery of the truck in May 1994. We followed the same design that the 10 other trucks in our fleet currently have," said Charo.

"This is part of our ongoing effort to let our customers know that we are committed to professionalism at all costs."

The sleek silver unit, which covers a five-state area, services several major oil and environmental services companies on its route.

Excellent

AllergyBuyersClub Category Winner

Click to enlarge

New for 2004! Miele's newest top of the line midsize vacuum cleaner has a Miele Sealed System™ similar to the Solaris, Blue Moon, and Silver Moon vacuums, and has earned certification for keeping virtually all allergens inside the vacuum cleaner. The included new SEB236 Powerbrush electric carpet tool has a wider brush roll (over 2.5" wider) than any other Miele model we carry, and the 5 height adjustment makes this vacuum best for low to high pile height carpet in a medium sized house. In addition, this Miele has state of the art features - an electrified direct connect wand for speedy changing of tools without any external wires. The external casing has a luxurious texture and a soft red color. These vacuums are the category award winner for the highest rating in high end vacuum cleaners.

Very Good Plus

NEW

$378.95 and up

Click to enlarge

New for 2004! Miele ART vacuum cleaners are a completely new concept in vacuum cleaners which are also allergy friendly with HEPA filters. Each sleek and powerful model offers the ease and convenience of a lightweight stick vac (only 13 lbs.), the power of a canister vacuum, and the mobility of an upright – all with an attractive colorful exterior available in one of 3 designs shown below. The Red Roses model is the first vacuum to have an artful image lacquered onto the exterior. ART vacuums are good as a supplement to a full size vacuum. These are not full size vacuum cleaners, but are much more powerful than electric brooms. Each model includes a straight suction floorhead instead of a rotating brush, that is suited for those with any smooth surfaces and low-pile carpets. A ready to use combi nozzle, which is a dusting brush and crevice tool into one, slips out easily from the telescopic tube and is ideal for dusting and cleaning sofa cushions, desktops and more. These user-friendly vacuums come pre-assembled in the box, and there are no loose attachments.

Completely allergen-free vacuuming with central vacuum cleaners that will add to the resale value of your home. Central vacuums exhaust the dirt through ducts into a power unit located in one room such as a basement, or to the outside. Once the power unit is professionally installed, simply attach the 30 ft. hose into any vacuum outlet, and the dust and debris goes through the ducts into one central unit. We have been impressed with the effectiveness of this central vacuum and the president of our company uses it in her home. These central vacuum cleaners come with complete installation kits and a manual for ease of assembly.

Miele ART S930 and S938 HEPA Vacuum Cleaners

Very Good Plus

New for 2004! Miele ART vacuum cleaners are a completely new concept in vacuum cleaners which are also allergy friendly with HEPA filters. Each sleek and powerful model offers the ease and convenience of a lightweight stick vac (only 13 lbs.), the power of a canister vacuum, and the mobility of an upright – all with an attractive colorful exterior available in one of 3 designs shown below. The Red Roses model is the first vacuum to have an artful image lacquered onto the exterior. ART vacuums are good as a supplement to a full size vacuum. These are not full size vacuum cleaners, but are much more powerful than electric brooms. Each model includes a straight suction floorhead instead of a rotating brush, that is suited for those with any smooth surfaces and low-pile carpets. A ready to use combi nozzle, which is a dusting brush and crevice tool into one, slips out easily from the telescopic tube and is ideal for dusting and cleaning sofa cushions, desktops and more. These user-friendly vacuums come pre-assembled in the box, and there are no loose attachments.

My Problem

I have a long hair white shepherd. I need a better vacuum that will get most of the hair. I already own a dirt devil and it stinks.

Convertible Pro-Shark

I have a perfect vacuum cleaner for him to try out it is called the Euro-Pro Shark upright vacuum cleaner that can be converted into a hand held vacuum cleaner. I have used the hand held vacuum cleaner on cat hair and it works trust me. This vacuum cleaner can be purchased in almost any department store that carries appliances for your home.

The first time I heard about this type of vacuum cleaner was on an infomercial. I assure you that this vacuum cleaner really works.

Shop Vac Passes the Test

I have four cats and a dog. I have found that our Craftsman shop vacuum works wonders on picking up hair from the floor, furniture and carpeted cat stand. It's a lot cheaper than other vacuums, too. You can get several attachments with it.

Weddings

At one point in my life, I was owned by 38 cats (I raised and showed various breeds) and two longhaired dogs. Talk about hair! The easiest and cheapest method I found for dealing with it on upholstery is to put on a regular household rubber glove and rub your hand over the surface. The hair will form long "ribbons" which are easy to vacuum up, or just pick them up and throw them away.

For carpets, I lightly mist the surface with a dilute mixture of fabric softener and water. Allow drying, then vacuuming as usual. The fabric softener mix seems to cut down on any static electricity, which is probably responsible for the hair clinging to the carpet fibers.

Thoroughly brushing your dog every day, especially during the major shedding season in spring, will help reduce the amount of hair. During very hot weather, you might also consider having your dog clipped. He/she will be cooler, and the hair that does shed won't be as noticeable as quickly.
W.

Vacuum and "Stair Tool"

The very best is Oreck. It's lightweight, so you'll be more inclined to use it. Also, those lint removers--the ones on a roller--are terrific for picking up hair. On carpeted stairs, take a small amount of water (about a quart), dip a dollar store brush in it, and brush the carpet. You'll be amazed with how much hair you'll get. It's a labor of love, but remember to brush your dog at least every other day, preferably outside. If you must groom your pet indoors, do it in a non-carpeted area, and use the lint remover (have it handy before you begin), to get the fur.
VZ

Turned to Fantom Fury

We also had a Dirt Devil, and hated it! We now have a Fantom Fury bagless vacuum, with a HEPA filter. Our two dogs are shorthaired, but shed year round, and this vacuum does a super job of getting up all the hair. The cost was about the same, but the difference in performance is amazing.
Peach

Found the Hoover Wind Tunnel to Work

I have had almost every major brand of vacuum on the market. The one I have now is, by far, the best. It is a Hoover Wind Tunnel (Premium). I have three young children (ages five, seven & nine months) who are very rough on my carpet. The older girls and I all have very long hair which get everywhere, not to mention the sand and grass tracked in from outside. I had a Dirt Devil, which would not pick up lint or hair, much less anything as heavy as dirt. The Hoover, however, picks up everything you can see and has an imbedded dirt finder, which gets the stuff you can't see. My carpet looks new after every vacuum. It costs about $400, which is a little high for a vacuum, but it is well worth the expense. I'm sure I spent more than that on all the other machines I tried and tossed after one year of usage. I have the bag version, but it also comes in a bagless version.
LN

Small, Light and Powerful

To the lady looking for a good vacuum: Without a doubt I'd recommend the Fantom Lighting. Initially my husband and I bought one because it was small and light and I could operate it with my bad back. However, we have been more than happy with the results. We have two indoor cats that shed year-round. Not only does our Fantom do a great job of picking up the fur; it also removes an enormous amount of dust. Plus it has an HEPA-filter, and even friends with allergies enjoy a visit if we are careful to vacuum everything (including furniture) before they arrive.

The Fantom is bagless, comes with a great warranty, and the HEPA-filter only needs to be changed once a year. (Hint: buy the HEPA-filter at Wal-Mart, not a vacuum specialty store for significant savings)
Carmen

Professional's Choice

First off, I am a professional cleaner. I vacuum a LOT! My contracts include a banquet facility, a sports bar(lots of peanuts, pretzels and other nasty things to vacuum up), a small racquet ball/tennis club (grass, hair, paper), a high end restaurant (crumbs and food bits), a small clothing store (hair and tracked in dirt) and a large apartment complex (where I do move out cleanings only). I am the last one in to tidy after the maintenance man and the painter.

I always suggest skipping the "bargain store" brand vacuums and going straight to the commercial models. Eureka makes a (blue) home version of their (red) commercial Sanitaire that is very good that cost a bit less. Sanitaire is my personal favorite. My employees and I have tested many, many vacuums over the years. Some only made it a week before I took it back went back to Eureka.

I have also had a fairly good experience with a Fantom vacuum. One of my employees brought one in that she had purchased as a scratched store model (top of the line) so it had been slightly used. We ran it mostly for the very convenient hose feature for almost three years. Please never get an Oreck. They advertise that hotels use them, but even their commercial model fell apart on me in about seven months use. Very disappointing since it seemed to have potential in the beginning. We also disapprove of Dirt Devil for the sheer fact that they fall apart so easily and just don't last. Kirbys are clunky and heavy, hard to keep clean and maintained. We tried out some Panasonic and Sharp vacuums for about a month, I think they make their vacuums under a different name now, but they also don't last. What a waste!

Most people balk at the initial cost of a good commercial vacuum, but these are really made to take a beating and run for long periods without overheating. They are made to pick up tiny dirt, small hairs as well as larger chunks. Even running over small screws has not hurt mine. Another huge plus of the commercial vacuums is that most are made for easy operator maintenance and care. The parts are readily available and easily installed or cleaned, lubricated and checked by the owner. Ask you dealer to show you how to do the take down and maintenance. If he won't, you go somewhere else and say so.

Commercial vacuums last many, many years. I run my personal work vacuum at least four hours a day and it is now two and a half years old and running strong(well over 3500 hours). I expect to use it for at least another two years, even then I will trade it in as a usable unit and invest in a new one.

I use the same brand in my home. Mine is currently six years old and I expect to be using it for another 20 years. My business currently owns four Sanitaires that all work great.

If you can, get a vacuum with a reusable bag or cup to save on the paper filters. Keep your vacuum cleaned. Pick off the bits that collect on your beater, wipe down the base to keep it from building gunk and friction.

One really good hint for any vacuum is to empty your bag often, even if it is not full. It will really extend the life of your vacuum. Your reader who has the dog hair problem may be helped by simply emptying her filter and cleaning her beater every time she vacuums. Another problem she may be having is that she is vacuuming too fast. Try going more slowly over the areas to give your vacuum time to suck it up. Most people vacuum too fast. The key is slower and consistent overlapping strokes.
HG

Traded Fantom for a Riccar

I had purchased a Fantom vacuum but the motor burned out after three years. I asked the salesman at a shop that sells and repairs sewing machines and vacuum cleaners how much it would be to repair it. He recommended that I invest the money in a Riccar vacuum, because we have two chow dogs and it would be more efficient at picking up the fur. He said that's why the Fantom vacuum was not working, it was not made for long dog hair.

I have been using the Riccar for three years now and am very pleased. It has stronger suction than the Fantom. I thought the bagless vacuums were supposed to have stronger suction, but I have found that this is not true. Another nice feature of the Riccar is that if there is a clog in the machine, it will automatically shut the motor off. That way you will avoid burning the motor. This happened to me once; there was a huge wad of dog fur in the hose. It was really great to have this feature in the vacuum because it prevented the vacuum from being damaged.

Sherry

Quality Comes with a Price Tag

Most people agree that the three "expensive" companies -- Electrolux, Kirby, and Rainbow -- offer the best vacuum quality. I have a friend who worked for Electrolux for a short time so I have learned a lot about that particular brand and am partial to it. The great thing about these machines is that they last years and years. My friend serviced machines from the 1950's that people were still using as their original vacuums. However, the prices of these machines are extremely high. One way around this is to call the shops in your area to inquire about used machines. The companies often take trade-ins of older models to encourage people to upgrade to new ones, and frequently sell these inexpensively. You can also get free in-home demonstrations for these products so you can judge the quality for yourself.

Alternatively, check out some consumer magazines with articles about vacuums at your local library and decide what brand you think will best meet your needs. Then call local vacuum repair shops to see whether you can get a used vacuum of a similar model.

What's the World's Best Vacuum?

From tiny robot vacs to the $1,100 Miele, our writer tests them all.

By Seth Stevenson

To find out which vacuum cleaner is best, I tested eight different models that varied widely in cost and design. Which should you buy? First off, any vacuum purchase requires a few big decisions, which include:

Upright or Canister?

Uprights are the tall, vertical, one-piece vacuums you push with a handle. Canisters consist of a little module you pull around on wheels behind you. Uprights excel on wide tundras of open carpet. Canisters, with their myriad nozzle attachments, do their best work high up in a jungle of bookshelves and drapes. ("Above-floor cleaning," they call this in the biz.)

Both types will do a fine all-around job. But personally, I'm an upright fan. Dragging around a canister makes me feel like I've been harnessed—like I'm a husky hauling a teeny little sled across my carpet.

Bagged or Bagless?

The current industry schism. Both systems suck air the same way—the difference is just a matter of whether the dirt inside that air gets trapped in a disposable bag or (with bagless) in a reusable container.

Bags have ruled the market for decades, but their days may be numbered; bagless seems to be rapidly gaining ground. Even Hoover, for years an old-guard bagged stalwart, has recently rushed to meet rising demand with a new line of bagless models. Ultimately, bagged-to-bagless may be among the great consumer paradigm shifts of our age—up there with wired-to-wireless.

So, how to choose? Well, for bagless vacuums, the advantages are:

1) The containers are see-through, which means you can easily see when a bagless vacuum has had its fill of dirt and needs to be dumped. With a bag you have to check all the time, opening up the vacuum and kneading the bag with your hands, and you often feel like you're guessing.

2) It's a hassle and an expense (perhaps $50 per year depending on how much you vacuum) to buy new bags, and it's a pain to install them (which, again depending on use, could be every few weeks).

3) There's the environmental angle, what with all that disposable paper.

In the end, I prefer a good bagless. It's just easier. To quote a call to arms I read on one online vacuum chat board: "GET RID OF THE BAG, GET RID OF THE PROBLEM!"

HEPA or Not HEPA

It's an allergies thing. HEPA means high-efficiency particle arrest. A HEPA-certified vacuum filter will trap even very fine dust, preventing it from escaping back out into your house. This is good news if you have allergies. If you don't have any allergies, though, you likely won't notice any difference. And if you've got truly horrid, eye-reddening allergies, well, you should probably go ahead purchase a central vacuum system. (With this system, the motor and filter are installed in one place outside your house, and you plug your vacuum hose into various permanent outlets within.) A central vacuum sucks fine dust out permanently, so there's no chance that it will escape back into the room.

And Now, on to the Testing

I set myself up in the carpeted conference room of my office building, surrounded by my eight test vacuums, and devised the following challenges:

1) I dropped animal crackers on the floor and ground them in with the heel of my shoe, to see which vacs could pry crumbs from the carpet fibers.

2) I collected hair clumps from a friend's shedding dog and mashed them into the carpet with the palm of my hand, to see which vacs could pick up pet hair.

3) I dropped fistfuls of pennies on the carpet, to see what sort of havoc they might wreak on vacuum innards.

4) I plugged in and ran four vacuums at a time, which a) allowed me to judge their suction power side by side; b) created a roar akin to a midflight RAF jet; c) blew a fuse in the conference room, causing a power outage.

5) I dumped out, and then vacuumed up, piles of Official American Household Dirt that I had ordered. This mix of 90 percent silica and 10 percent talc was determined by the American Society of Testing and Materials to offer a blend of large and small particles, thus accurately capturing the nature of dirt from the typical American household. Samples of this dirt were mailed to me in small plastic baggies, which were in turn packaged in a plain brown envelope.

I also spent the past few weeks browsing online vacuum chat boards. People who post on these boards fall fairly neatly into three groups: lonely heartland housewives; obsessive collectors of rare vacuums, like vintage Rainbows and Electroluxes; and lastly, people who just like to think and talk about vacuums. This last group fascinates me—I find them equal parts beautiful and sad.

I didn't learn much from these chat boards, as many threads quickly turned into fights over who slept with whom at the vacuum-collectors conference. (Honestly, I saw this happen repeatedly.)

And at Last, on to My Findings (From Worst to First)

Oreck XL Deluxe, $369.95 (plus shipping).Worst by far. Orecks get no love from the chat boards; "95% promotion and 5% product," said one vacuum-store owner I spoke with. (Orecks are available at some retailers but are sold mostly through telephone orders and promotional mailings. The Oreck company boasts about the XL's light weight (only 8 pounds—other vacs can be double or triple that), but it's horribly underpowered. It couldn't even suck pennies off the carpet because they were too heavy. No other vacuum had this problem. Plus, the Oreck's vacuum bags are unwieldy, and its tubes are known (says a vac-store manager) for getting clogged because they're too narrow. Finally, don't believe the ad where the Oreck lifts a bowling ball—that's a physics trick performed with a special funnel. Despite its hefty price, the Oreck just feels cheaply made.

Euro-Pro Shark Sweeper, $79.80.
You may have seen infomercials for this vacuum. It's a cordless, rechargeable, battery-powered sweeper, and it's actually not horrible. It's feather-light, and going cordless is incredibly convenient. The problem: It just doesn't clean well enough on carpets. It has no suction mechanism—just a spinning brush roll—so while it sweeps up the surface shmutz into its little dirt cup, it fails to suck out the dirt that's deeper down in the carpet. On hard floors, of course, it works great, utterly replacing a broom and dustpan. I can recommend the Shark if you live in a home with very little carpeting.

Hoover Self-Propelled Bagless Upright, $379.95.
One of Hoover's new bagless offerings. This thing is a beast—by far the heaviest vacuum I tried and tough to maneuver around. It's "self-propelled," but for me this mostly meant it didn't want to go where I wanted it to. It has very aggressive brush-roll spinning (or agitation, as they say in the biz). Some Hoovers have been known to melt through carpets if left agitating in one place for too long, so watch out for that. Overall, a decent vac, but just too heavy and nothing to write home about. (Although it does have a headlight, which I like because it's ridiculous. I mean really, a headlight? On a vacuum? Why?)

Miele Silver Moon, $1,129.95.
What kind of vacuum do you get for over a grand? A regular old vacuum, as far as I can tell. Yes, it's well-constructed, with high-quality plastic and a sleek, minimalist look. The chat-boarders say it will last 15-20 years. (You'll need to replace your average vacuum four times over in that time span.) And it's very quiet, which is a huge plus. But it's still just a vacuum. It's got bags you have to throw out and replace. You still have to drag it around (it's a canister). What's more, it had the shortest cord of any vacuum I tested (a giant negative in my book—nobody likes to unplug and resituate mid-vacuuming) and also the shortest hose. For this much lettuce, I expected miracles. All I got was a pretty good vacuum.

Roomba Intelligent FloorVac, $199.99.
This is the little robot vacuum that purports to clean your carpets all on its own. You set it in the middle of a room, turn it on, and it self-navigates around until it's covered every nook and cranny. I loved this adorable droid, despite its flaws. The navigation program is good, and in the two rooms I tried it in, the Roomba didn't miss a spot. I kept thinking, "No way you're getting under that desk chair, little dude!" and yet it always did. The drawback: Like the Shark Sweeper, the Roomba has no suction—just agitation—so it gets the visible stuff but leaves deeper dirt behind. On hard floors, though, this thing is an absolute monster. Set it up in your tiled kitchen and go run some errands. (I'm betting within the next few years, they'll perfect the Roomba for carpets, too.)

Hoover WindTunnel Bagless Canister, $399.95.
Another new Hoover bagless, but this time a canister. A really solid entry, I thought, as it performed well at all tasks. To my eyes, not much different from the Miele canister. Except the Hoover is bagless, which I prefer. It's easy to use, compact and light; it also has cute retro styling with a sort of PT Cruiser look. The only time it failed me was on the pennies test: Its brush roll once stuck and jammed when a coin got wedged in it.

Dyson DC07, $419.94.
British inventor James Dyson created thousands of vacuum prototypes (a sucker born every minute, I suppose) before arriving at his cyclone bagless system. It's complicated, and you should go to www.dyson.com for the full explanation, but the upshot is that everyone, from vac-store folks to chat-boarders, seems to agree that the Dyson system creates and sustains incredibly powerful suction. And indeed, according to my nonscientific test (I held my palm against the open hose), it tied with the Miele for strongest suck. For me, though, what makes this upright bagless the winner is its superior design. Longest cord by far. Longest hose, too. Attractive styling. All of which make it just a joy to push around the carpet. And I love the big, clear dust container. You can see exactly what you've picked up (providing a sense of accomplishment), and, of all the bagless vacs, it's the easiest to empty out, requiring only the pull of a plastic trigger for a trapdoor to open and all the dirt inside to vacate. Dyson claims the filters never need changing—just an occasional washing. These Dysons are new to the marketplace, and it remains to be seen how durable they'll be, but they're already causing a sensation on vacuum chat boards. This clear winner's less than half the cost of a Miele, and just as good.

The vacuum I ordered arrived on time, works fine, and seems--at this point--to be a good purchase. My only disappointment is that I could have saved about $30.00+ dollars had I done ome more research on the internet as other merchants had the same item for less. Except for that, there was no problem with the purchase or delivery.

This was my first on-line purchase and I couldnt be happier.I purchased a Sanitaire SC684 upright vacuum cleaner. I had looked at this vacuum in stores near me. I got the cleaner for $34.00 less than the store price. The customer service person e-mailed me when it was shipped and I received it in 4 days. I especially like this vacuum cleaner because I can vacuum all 3 of my bedrooms without unplugging it from the hall receptacle. I have arthritis in my arms and the vacuum cleaner is light ...

Manufacturer: Eureka

Our Price: $217.76

Average Customer Rating: 4.77 out of 5

Description:

With the Eureka Whirlwind upright, there's no need to rely on mere eyesight to determine whether your floor is clean. This vacuum supplies the features to ensure a thorough vacuum job and the feedback technology to help you gauge them. For starters, Eureka's Dirt Alert device uses a beam of light to scan the floor in front of the machine. If debris breaks up the beam, an indicator light lets you know to keep vacuuming. Once dirt is in the machine, it spins through the Whirlwind's cyclonic dust collector into particulate chambers nestled in a see-through cup. When the dust cup is full, you just unhook it and dump it out. The HEPA filtration system, perhaps the Whirlwind's most desirable feature, filters both suctioned air and exhaust to trap ultra-fine particles. Pollen, dander, and spores--down to 0.3 microns in size-- stay inside the machine where they can't trigger allergies. A pre-motor filter, that can be rinsed clean regularly, assists the HEPA filter, which requires replacement about twice yearly. Lights on the feedback panel let you know when to clean or change the filters.

The Eureka Whirlwind is designed for carpet or bare floors, with a hardwood setting and eight carpet options. On-board attachments include a crevice tool, a combo brush for furniture and upholstery, two extension wands, and a see-through, clogresistant hose. Built with an ergonomically curved grip, a no-tip design, and a quiet motor, the vacuum is comfortable and convenient to use. The 15-inch cleaning path, oversized brush roll, and wide-beam headlight, as well as the ability to clean 11 feet above the floor are all nice features. A back-mounted helper handle even makes the Whirlwind easy to take up and down the stairs. --Emily Bedard

Summary: Best Vacuum you can buy!

Comment: After hours of research and trying out vacuums I trusted the reviews on this site and purchased this vacuum. I was pleasantly surprised. The power of this vacuum is amazing. I steamed cleaned my carpet the day before this machine arrived. I still got a container full of dirt. Don't waste money on Hoover or Dyson. This vacuum is the best by far. Goodbye Hoover, hello Eureka!

Customer Rating: 5 out of 5

Summary: Very good!!

Comment: After having read the reviews on this site I decided to go ahead and purchase this particular vaccum cleaner. I have a dog, and in the past previous vacuum cleaners have choked and died on the dog hair! This vacuum cleaner is a marvel. It picks up dog hair with ease, makes my carpets look like new, and even tells me when there is still dirt on the carpet, amazing! I would highly recommend this vaccum for those with pets, especially the long haired variety. It is also great at getting dust out of the carpet. Being in Alaska, we get a lot of dust once summer sets in. I was amazed, and horrified!, at the amount of dust coming out of my carpet. Needless to say, I am very proud of my carpets now and show off my Eureka to all who are interested...P.S. I guarantee it will fascinate your husband to see the dirt collect in the see through container...and make him vaccum more! But keep this to yourselves ladies :)

Summary: Super Vacuum!

Comment: Now THIS is a vacuum! Very minimal assembly required - just snap a few pieces in place. Instructions easy to follow. Super suction and cleaning power - is picking up stuff my Hoover wouldn't. I'm genuinely amazed at the amount of dust and pet hair it is getting out of the rug.

Quality and cleaning ability is exceptional for the price. No other cleaner I've had even begins to compare. It is shipped double-boxed, and packing inside protects the vacuum during transit.

It IS heavy and solid - but maneuvers easily enough. There is a small extra charge for shipping due to package size and weight.

Vacuum is bagless - saving money there, too. Filtration system is excellent for anyone with asthma or allergies. If you empty the dust cup slowly and carefully there is minimal dust.

All in all, this is one of the best purchases I've ever made. I highly recommend this vacuum!
